 Atlases of Mental Health are essential tools for decision making and quality assessment. These Atlases include detailed information on social and demographic characteristics and health-related needs, as well as data on services availability and care capacity. Atlases of Health allow comparison between local areas, highlighting variations of care, and detecting gaps in the provision of services. This project will benefit planners and decision makers, as it facilitates collaborative work and knowledge transfer to the different public agencies and companies involved in the mental health planning and provision in Central and Eastern Sydney.
